While preaching near Terryhugan, Ireland, Robert Strawbridge met and married a devoted Wesleyan, Elizabeth Piper. In 1760, they chose, as was fairly common at the time, to make their home in the New World. They rented a small farm and a log house in Maryland, in an area known as Sam’s Creek.

Robert immediately set about spreading the word of Wesleyan Methodism. In a very short time, he established what was known as a house church like those of John Wesley in England. This was the First Society of Methodists in America, and it met in the living room of the Strawbridge House.

Soon, Robert and his followers built a Log Meeting House for preaching and singing – the first dedicated Methodist Structure in America. At the same time, Robert began to travel widely around the area, establishing Methodist Classes in many far-flung places. His journeys took him to Delaware, to the Eastern Shore of Maryland, New Jersey, Georgetown, DC, Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

While Robert traveled, Elizabeth managed their home, farm and six children. Through her witness and influence, one of their neighbors, John Evans, became the first American convert to Methodism.

At the first Annual Conference held in America in 1773, Francis Asbury, Strawbridge, and two others were appointed to Baltimore, the largest circuit of the fledgling church.

Robert passed away while preaching in Baltimore in 1781. Three years later, at the famous Christmas Conference of 1784 at Lovely Lane Meeting House in Baltimore, the Methodist Episcopal Church was launched as a new Protestant denomination.

At this Conference, Wesley’s envoys, Asbury and Thomas Coke, were elected as bishops to carry on the work so faithfully begun by Strawbridge.

The Strawbridge Shrine Association was created in 1937 to preserve and protect the first home of Methodism in America for all generations.
